White Rhodesians Assail Smith Plan

By David Ottaway

SALISBURY. Rhodesia. Sept.12 (WP) - For the first time in the 13-year history of white Rhodesia, the country's whites are failing to rally behind their heretofore undisputed champion. Prime Minister lan Smith, and are openly saying he lacks leadership at a time of major Caught between a rising white backlash and an ever-hardening black guerrills stance, Mr. Smith, 59, seems to be standing more alone than ever before in his storm-filled political life. Although he is in no immediate danger of being forced to resign, his room for maneuver at home and abroad has suddenly narrowed enormously.

Ironically for a man branded outside as a bard-line white supremacist, it is his relative moderation that is getting him into trouble in white Rhodesia these days.

Reaction among the 230,000 remaining whites to his speech Sunday announcing only limited new measures to deal with the escalating guerrilla war has been on the whole one of deep disappointment and even outright anger. Mr. Smith declared martial law in some areas of the country and a crackdowo on the black internal opposition, but he rejected total mobilization and nationwide military rule.

Approval Doubted

After the shooting down by guerrillas of an Air Rhodesia passenger plane, killing 38 persons, and the reported slaying of ten of the 18 survivors, the mood of the white community is such that it is seriously doubted that Mr. Smith can now win approval of his promised white referendum this fall on a new constitution ushering in black-majority

This means that his eotire so-called "internal settlement" with three moderate black leaders is in serious danger of being rejected by the very constituency that has followed him so loyally and even blindly ever since the whites unilaterally declared their independence of Britain 13 years ago this November.

There has been o spate of calls for Mr. Smith's resignation this week from ordinary whites, and, far more seriously, a number of his own Cabinet ministers have taken to campaigning openly against the March internal settlement and calling upon their constituents to vote no in the referendum on the new constitution. Such indiscipline among leading members of the ruling white Rhodesian Front Party was virtually unheard of before, and it reflects the growing disenebantment within the party's all-powerful caucus

— The State Department said to-- The State Department said to-day that 66 U.S. citizens and 64 members of their families who are Cubans will leave Cuba for Miami on Thursday in the first stage of a repatriation program agreed to by President Fidel Castro.

Department spokesman Hodd-ing Carter 3d also said that a team of six U.S. officials is in Havana processing the first group of 48 Cuban political prisoners who will be granted permission to go to the United States.

With family members of this group included, 150 persons will make up the initial contingent, Mr. Carter said. Representatives from the State Department, the FBI and the Immigration and Naturalization Service are conducting the screening to insure that all are genuine prisoners. That group will return to Washington on Sunday.

Dual National

The U.S. citizens who will return on Thursday are also Cuban citizens. They always have been free to done emigrate to the United States but Mr. Castro had refused them persaid.

Mr. Castro outlined his new poliey to Rep. Frederick Richmond, D-N.Y., last December. Lists dating to the early 1960s indicate there were 480 dual nationals who would be eligible to come to the United States with their families. However, it is not clear how many have died in the interim or how many wish to remain in Cuba.

Mr. Castro said that there are 3,000 political prisoners in Cuba hut it is unclear how many would be eligible to leave the country under the new policy. Mr. Carter indicated that between 1.500 and 3,000 might be released but other officials said that the Cubans have not been precise on this point. Mr. Castro told the Cuban expatriates that the United States has a "very great responsibility" to those imprisoned because of its attempts to foment counter-revolution in Cuba over the years.

Western diplomats say that, to the best of their knowledge, the several thousand Cuban troops in Eritrea have played an advisory and supportive role but have oot engaged in direct combat.

The diplomats believe that Mr.

Castro may attempt once more to mediate in the war. In the past, Lt. Col. Mengistu has shown himself to be a hard-liner on Eritrea, insisting on a military solution unless the rebels drop their demand for independence.

Today's celebrations were also attended by Vasili Kuznetsov, Sovi-et first vice president, who arrived during the weekend.

serious, with no cease-fire in sight, that there are doubts oow that the elections will be held. The origins of Rhodesia as a British colony go back to Sept. 12, 1890, when a small column led by Lt. Col. Edward Pennefather reached the Salisbury area, planted the Union Jack at Cecil. Square and founded Fort Salisbury nearby. The square at the city's center was named after the Cecil family, which was deeply involved in Britain's colunial history in southern Africa. But it was Cecil John Rhodes, an imperial en-trepreneur and head of the British South Africa Company, who was responsible for sending the pioneer column, and after whom Rhodesia was named.

Rhodesia became a self-governing British colony in 1923. The whites under Mr. Smith broke away and declared their in-dependence in November, 1965. No country has formally recog-nized Rhodesia, and for the last six years black nationalist guerrillas have been fighting to seize control of the country.

Wallace Muhammad End Black Muslim Leadership

By Bill Drummond

WASHINGTON, Sept. 12
Wallace Muhammad, leader of the Black Muslims for the past 3½ years, has resigned, leaving that religious movement shaken.

The surprise announcement was made Sunday night at an Atlanta Muslim gathering from which Mr. Muhammad was speaking over a telephone hookup to 200 mosques. He said he was stepping down and turning direction of the movement over to a 17-member council.

"In Islam, there is no priest-bood," said Mr. Muhammad, 44, son of the organization's powerful founder, Elijah Muhammad, who died in 1975.

During the younger Mr. Muhammad's tenure as spiritual leader, he has turned the once-militant move-ment away from the black national-ist, anti-white teachings of his father, who had ruled with a stern hand for more than 40 years. Wallace Muhammad's decision to step down as chief imam (a title given to a spiritual and secular leader in Islam) was his most drastic change yet.

Hassan Shariff, an aide, said in a telephone interview from the group's Chicago headquarters. When be made the announcement in Atlanta, a bush fell over the entire audience. Reactions have been coming in to me from around the country. People were shocked."

U.K. Aide to Visit Berlin

According to information available here, Cuban specialists are manning the Ministries of Foreign Trade, Transportation, Health and Public Works, as well as training the Angolan armed forces. Since there is no sign of an accommodation between the Savimbi movement and the Neto government, State Department officials before that there is scant bope that the Caban forces could be reduced with out endangering the government. Nevertheless the U.S. officials said that they bad been heartened by Mr. Noto's cooperative attitude in opening discussions with the United States on the general securty of southern Africa. The most notable move in this direction was the Angolan president's visit to neighboring Zaire last month, where he concluded a series of agreements with President Mobutu Sese Seko, long an outspo-ken antagonist of the Marxist gov-ernment in Luanda. The two agreed to establish a mixed border commission to curb violent frontier incidents, to initiate voluntary refugee repatriations; to reopen the railway that links Zaire's copper mines with Angola's seaport of Benguela; and to open diplomatic relations.

The U.S. officials said that they had been surprised at how swiftly both sides moved to implement these agreements, including step to exchange some of the 200,000 Zairian refugees in Angola for some of the 60,000 Angolan refu-gees in Zaire. An official called this "positive" development in efforts to establish stability in the region — the principal U.S. objective.

The officials acknowledged Mr.
Neto's contribution toward a UN formula last month for a peaceful settlement in Southwest Africa that settlement in Southwest Africa that would create a black majority government and the independent state of Namibia.

U.S. specialists believe that Mr. Neto, although an avowed Marcist, would prefer to bave broader policy options than are available to him now with so many Cuban and Soviet advisers in his country and with continuing dislocations caused by continuing dislocations caused by the Savimbi guerrilla movement.

They note that in addition to allowing the Gulf Oil Company to run its drilling operations in the Angolan enclave of Cabinda the Neto government has been discusing further oil exploration with secral other U.S. oil companies. Specifications Said Ignored

GSA Reported to Buy Inferior Office Equipment

By Ronald Kessler

WASHINGTON, Sept. 12 (WP)

— General Services Administration investigators have found that the GSA has been paying millions of dollars to a New Jersey firm, Art Metal Inc., for chairs and file cabinets that do not meet GSA's specifications.

GSA technicians, who examined and tested the office furniture. found that it bore little resemblance to what the GSA had speci-fied when it sought bids from furniture manufacturers, according to sources. "Three models of chairs didn't meet the specifications on almost any part," a source said.

Although the GSA knew that the office chairs did not meet specifications, the agency earlier this year awarded Art Metal a $5.5-million contract to make them. It turned down bids from three firms whose chairs met specifications, according

'Generally Shoddy'

Robert Hughes, who was in charge of furniture buying for the GSA until July, said yesterday that he objected to giving Art Metal the contract when its chairs did not meet the bid specifications. He also said that Art Metal's products were generally "shoddy."

But Mr. Hughes said that he was overruled by Robert Graham, a former Citibank executive who was put in charge of the GSA's federal supply service more than a year ago by Jay Solomon, the GSA administrator.

"Graham said, Go ahead, we have no reason not to award the contract," according to Mr. Hughes. "He understood [that the chair] didn't meet the specifications, but they [other GSA officials] believed it was better than what the specifications called for.

The whole idea of competitive bidding is you bid on the same item. If you're not, it ought to be rejected," said Mr. Hughes, who now works for a furniture manufacturer's representative.

The GSA is the purchasing arm the federal government.

Mr. Graham, who recently made Mr. Solomon angry by appearing to defend his employees' practice of buying typewriters and calculators for the government at higher prices than those charged by local retail stores, said yesterday that be told Mr. Hughes to make up his own mind about wbether to go ahead with the $5.5 million chair contract.

Experts Think One Bullet Hit Kennedy, Connally

 A space engineer and a photo-graph analyst told Congress today their studies show that President John F. Kennedy and former Texas Gov. John Connally could have been wounded by a single bullet fired from the Texas School Book

Their testimony before the House Assassinations Committee supported two of the major conclusions of the Warren Commission, which said that Lee Harvey Oswald fired from a window of the building and was the lone gunman who killed Kennedy Nov. 22, 1963.

Tom Canning, a projects engineer with the National Aeronautics and Space Administration, said mathematical calculations showed that Kennedy and Mr. Connally were scated in the presidential limousine in such a way that a single bullet could have struck both.

That was the bullet which hit Kennedy from the back and passed through his neck. Mr. Connally, sitting in front of Kennedy, was wounded in the back, Kennedy's most serious wound was a bullet in

Warren Commission critics argue that the two men were struck by separate bullets and that this indicates a second gunman was involved

But Mr. Canning and photo-graph analyst Calvin McCamy testified that films and photos taken during the assassination provide the basis for computations of the relative position of the two-men,

Mr. Canning said he was able to construct the line of sight from the camera positions to Kennedy and Mr. Connally and determine with considerable precision Mr. Connally's position in front of and just to the left of Kennedy.

Few Surgical Candidates Seeking Free 2d Opinion

the need for major operations. Yet this seemingly ohvious self-protection mechanism has been a flop, with only about I percent of beneficiaries taking advantage of the option.

In Illinois, of 20,000 subscribers to Blue Cross-Blue Shield who underwent surgery recently, only 14 had asked for second opinions be-fore the operation although it would not have cost them anything.

Similarly, of 4,000 persons in New Hampshire and Vermont who underweot surgery during a one-month trial of the second opinion benefit, only one person asked to be examined by another specialist.

The value of the second opinioo has been demonstrated through pilot projects underwritteo by federal funds in New York and Detroit. It Nationally, 9 million Blue Cross-Blue Shield subscribers are entitled to second opinions - in fact the health insurer will even pay for a third opinion if oecessary - and the oumber will be more than 10 million in a few months. Two years ago, only 9 Blue Cross-Blue Shield plans offered the benefit. The nom-ber now is 27. Other bealth insurers are also offering the benefit.

"The expanded use of second opinioos is of benefit to all Americans, not just those who may face surgery and its consequences," said Joseph Califano Jr., secretary of HEW. He coted that millions of dollars in tax funds would be saved if second opinions deterred surgery for persons covered by Medicare and Medicaid.

A congressional investigating committee coocluded last year that in 1976 tinnecessary surgery accounted for 2.4 million needless operations in which 12,000 died. That surgery cost $4 hillion.

The drive for second opinions has been supported by many bealth groups such as the American Soci-ety for Internal Medicine.

The concept was given a big boost by a New York State law enacted two years ago that directed health insurers to make the benefit available to subscribers at no extra

Walter McNerney, president of Blue Cross-Blue Shield, said that while $750 to $1,500 in hospital costs would be saved by each operation not performed, the amounts of money actually being saved are not known.

"Sound conclusions on the amount of unnecessary surgery and the effectiveness of presurgical consultation programs will have to await further studies," he said.

U.S. Report Cites Carcinogens

States will come from exposure to carcinogens on the joh.

The figures, which sharply contradict much lower estimates made recently by industry, were made public yesterday by the secretary of health, education and welfare. Joseph Califano Jr.

Mr. Califano said that the study, but the Metional Control Control of the study.

the National Cancer Institute and the National Institute of Environmental Health Sciences, also showed that occupational exposure to asbestos alone may cause 2 mil-lion premature cancer deaths in the next three decades - roughly 17 percent of the total number of cancer deaths expected during that

In a speech to the AFL-CIO National Conference on Occupational Safety and Health here, Mr. Califano called the still-unreleased study's findings alarming and said that they would lead to increased emphasis on prevention rather than treatment of cancer.

The three-day conference, the first of its kind to be called by the union, was addressed by a variety of Carter administration officials, including Mr. Califano, Vice Presi-dent Mondale and Labor Secretary Ray Marshall.

To Counter Critics

The administration officials sought yesterday to counter recent criticism from labor and others that they have been willing to ease up on environmental and worker safety regulations in an effort to curh

AFL-CIO President George Meany yesterday called the proposal a "killer amendment" and warned "it will turn several million workplaces into death

Noting that earlier estil industry of the number of cancer cases related to occupational exposure ran between 1 and 5 percent, Mr. Califano, quoting from the fed-eral study, said, "If the full consequences of occupational exposures in the present and the recent past are taken into account, estimates of at least 20 percent appear much more reasonable and may even be Paint Scraper, conservative."

Other federal health officials familiar with the study said that the reseachers found that the number of occupationally related cancers may actually run to 40 percent of all cancers in the United States, the officials told the Washington Post

The researchers said that, in the next 30 to 35 years, the average number of cancers directly related to asbestos exposure will average 67,000 a year. Last year, about 375,000 cancers were reported, excluding cancers of the skin, federal officials said.

PEARL HARBOR, Hawaii, Sept. 12 (UPI) — It cost the Navy $171,000 to fix a problem in the nu-clear submarine Swordfish caused hy a misplaced 54-cent paint scraper, the Fearl Harbor Naval Ship-yard Log reports.

The vessel was drydocked for a week because someone apparently left the scraper behind after working on the submarine and it fell into a torpedo launcher, jamming it, the publication said.

"Jammed up in her launcher."
the Log said, "between the piston and cylinder wall, was a Navy 'garden variety' paint scraper which is selling today in stores for 54 cents. The Log remarked that the cost of repairs, $171,000, was equal to 10 years wages for a journeyman.

When the jammed piston was discovered, divers tried for more than a week to remove the scraper with the submarine in the water. They used a 40-ton hydraulic jack to try to free the piston. "No luck." said the report. "That's why she docked, so we could use our 'big guns' on it, so to speak."

of Cana 'Rare Earths' Suggested As Additives in Gasoline

By Malcolm W. Browne

NEW YORK, Sept. 12 (NYT) -With evidence mounting that lead untiknock additives in gasoline are a serious health hazard, a Universinves to replace lead and conserve

The proposed additives would be based on a group of 15 natural elements known as the "rare earths." according to Dr. Robert Sievers, who described his work in the jour-

Combined in complex organic molecules called beto diketonates, Dr. Sievers said that the rare earths form compounds which appear to be nearly as effective as the tetraethyl lead additives that have been used since the 1920s to prevent engine knocking.

The rare earth beta diketonates are very volatile and some can be made to evaporate even at room temperature, he said. This property could lead to many potential applications, including microthin metalplating techniques.

Unlike lead and many other heavy metals, the rare earths are essentially nonpoisonous, and their presence in exhaust emissions would probably not contaminate the atmosphere.

Despite the name rare earth, the elements in the group, which include cerium, lanthanum, praseodymium and neodymium, are abundant enough in the United States to treat the entire world's known petroleum reserves, Dr.

Many new automobiles are built to accept only lead-free gasoline, because their catalytic converters, which remove various toxic substances from exhaust gases, are quickly spoiled by lead.

But most clinical experts believe there is another reason at least as important for eliminating lead from automobile exhausts completely and soon.

Lead in Brains

Despite the decline in the use of lead additives, a study was published in the British scientific weekly Nature last month, in which it was reported that the brains of 22 humans who had died of various causes in the Copenhagen area all contained lead

The lead found in the Danish study, which was in the form of organic compounds used in gasoline, was highest in the brains of those persons who had lived in apartments closest to street level.

The discovery seemed especially serious in light of recent clinical findings that even trace amounts of ty of Colorado chemist has pro-posed a new class of nontoxic addi-force, under which the federal Environmenal Protection Agency requires producers to prove that any new substance will not endanger life and bealth.

Consequently, even though rareconsequency, even mough rare-earth gasoline additives are pre-sumably vastly less toxic than lead, they must pass much more rigorous tests, simply because lead was in use before the new law came into

"This situation, paradoxically, will make it much more difficult and costly for corporations to bring about innovations that could really help the environment," Dr. Sievers said. "Many chemical producers will be extremely conservative from now on about risking development money on anything new, which might, after years of testing, turn out to fail the toxicity standards."

Nevertheless, the need for gaso-line additives is likely to become urgent, Dr. Sievers said.

The main function of a lead additive in gasoline is to increase its effective octane number. Octane is measurement of gasoline's ability to burn smoothly instead of exploding and causing damaging knocking in an engine's cylinder.

Rare-earth additives are likely to accomplish the same thing, the chemist said, and will also catalyze the burning of carbon deposits, thus keeping engines efficient and free from the "dieseling" that caus-es dirty cylinders to fire even with the ignition switched off.

A New Caribbean Policy

For the United States there is a certain irony in the fact that the rebellion in Nicaragua against the Somoza family comes on the heels of the conclusion of a treaty with Panama that will eventually give the canal to that country. For the association between Washington and the Somozas in Managua came less from any anti-Communist reasons than from a desire to give stability to the country through which the most plausible alternative to the Panama Canal could be dug. And in general there was a Caribbean policy, created hy President Theodore Roosevelt, which was intended to keep potential enemies out of the islands in the sea off the canal and the lands bordering it.

The old Caribbean policy hegan to wohlle after World War II, when political dissensions became common and gunboat diplomacy died away.

For the gunhoat might homhard a port and send marines in to seize the customs house, a very vital part of any small state. But in later years the real fighting took place in the back country, where the crops grew or not as the guerrillas allowed. And when Castro Communized Cuha, the Bay of Pigs failed to halt him while only the grim missile crisis prevented the worst military threat. The Caribbean remains a critical strategic area for the United States, and will continue to he one even after the canal reverts to Panama. But the kind of intervention that put marines ashore in Nicaragua and helped put down Sandino in favor of a Somoza — the kind of Latin American adventurism that found expression in the novels of Richard Harding Davis and in the romanticization of the soldier of fortune, is virtually over.

What takes its place? Anastasio Somoza is heing battered by both businessmen and young radicals. The possibility of a nationwide expression of political opinion is very slim; what kind of government would emerge when and if Somoza abdicates is open to question. And Nicaragua remains the site of potential canal to the Pacific: a potential threat to the present waterway.

The most obvious course for Washington to pursue is to endeavor to have Somoza give way to a responsible group that would conduct national elections. But the chances of such a solution do not seem much better than in Rhodesia. And the United States could hring economic pressures on Nicaragua to work out a reasonably democratic form after the shooting dies down. This, in fact, seems the more promising of the alternatives, although the first should be pursued to whatever extent possible.

But at least this much is clear. The old Caribbean policy, a medley of the Monroe Doctrine with acute paternalism operating in sphere of influence, is quite dead. The Somoza rule is a legacy of the former policy - the United States cannot hear the full hlame for Somoza's misdeeds, any more than it can for, say, the late Peron regime in Argentina or the present dictatorship in Paraguay. There is still a Richard Harding Davis flavor about some Latin American politics and the United States did not create it. But in Nicaragua some of the guilt is fixed to Washington — and so, even apart from purely U.S. interests, some of the responsibility for helping the nation out of its past rests on the Potomac.

The Tumult in Iran

The tumult in Iran has reached a point where a good many people, including Iranians sympathetic to the shah, have been forced to consider whether he can hang on. Certainly, with conditions approaching something like civil war, a ruler less devoted than he to holding on to power and pushing through his ambitious modernization program might already have been tempted to anticipate a coup and seek out plush exile. Yet the shah remains on the throne, and in the light cast by the fierce challenge to him, it is possible to see with new clarity why Americans have good reason to hope he rides out

Some part of the protests against Shah Mohammed Reza Pahlavi presumably arise from the license he has given the political police, from his virtually insatiable appetite for advanced military hardware, and from the family and upper-class corruption he has tolerated if not spawned. Yet the two main sources of popular opposition are, in their separate backhanded ways, tributes to his vision for Iran.

The shah has presided over headlong economic progress. In so doing he has excited expectations of individual benefit that a far more competent government would have had trouble delivering. In modernizing, moreover, he has provoked frenzied opposition from traditional religious elements in a country long isolated and still largely rural. Those elements are opposed not just to the erosion of feudal ways hut also to such basic policy planks as land redistribution and the granting of rights to women. If you throw in as well the third dimension of Communist subversion — the shah, ohviously, tends to give high priority to this factor - you have a poisonous brew.

The causes of Iran's unrest are varied enough to have elicited suggestions for substantially different remedies from the shah's advisers, with military men emphasizing the immediate need for law and order and the civilians tending to urge renewed attention to political liheralization. At the moment the government is on the military track, but the shah is reportedly bent on returning to the civilian track as soon as events allow. The prospect of being swept out of power by the masses in the streets is evidently less immediate to him than a right-wing coup.

Either way it would be a misfortune for the United States. For its oil, for the stability it lends to an exceedingly shaky region, for the bulwark it forms to the spread of Soviet influence, Iran matters greatly to the United States. That is the rationale for the immense and pervasive American "presence" in Iran - political, military and economic. One can question whether all aspects of that presence are equally wise and necessary; one cannot deny that it exists.

If the United States is in fact committed to Iran, what makes that commitment tenable is the leadership of the shah. Unquestionably, he is more likely to go in the modernizing direction most Americans would like to see Iran go than any of the elements clamoring for his removal. It helps if you think for a minute of the Lihvan model of an oil-rich state led by a fanatical Iranian Qadhafi. That is a distinct possibility, and one truly threatening to American interests. Without the shah it could come to be.

Communist Obsession

The war is still going on in Indochina . . . The present conflict is a repetition of historical struggles between Vietnam and Camhodia and between Vietnam and China.

It should be added that the obsession of Communist regimes with the idea of struggle, what can be described as their addiction to comhat, gives an extra sharper edge to the

The Vietnamese have been waving the olive hranch at the Americans with increasing vigor . . . But Washington should think it over carefully. Vietnam's Russian connection adds a dimension of global danger to what is otherwise a local conflict. War on the Sino-Vietnamese horder could mean war on the Amur (China-Soviet border river). Incongruous as it may seem in the light of the recent past, if America has a chance - as the Vietnamese have strongly suggested — to play the peacemaker in Southeast Asia, then, in spite of all the risks, she should take it.

Threat to Swiss Economy

When the governments have a problem they usually appoint a commission to study it. So the fact that the Swiss government has recently appointed three such commissions to consider the effects of the high exchange rate on the economy of the country should mean that the situation is relatively grave.

Admittedly, order hooks are in general still healthily full, which would be a good sign if one could be sure that they told the whole story. But this seems to he increasingly doubtful and indeed there are indications that the latest round of rises in Swiss-franc rates has resulted in more far-reaching changes in the economy than hitherto appeared. It seems prohable that broad sectors of exporting have entered a zone in which there is no longer certainty that price disadvantages can be compensated for hy specialization, quality, better service and the like. It is therefore important that the wage front should not become fluid, and this implies continuing the tight hold on inflation. - From the Neue Zuercher Zeitung (Zurich).

NEW YORK - Phonetically clear though somewhat blurred, a short theatrical performance was given on a small screen of a "television" apparatus at Schnectady yesterday. Enthusiasis heralded this crude but impressive illustration as a forerunner of the time when performances by leading actors could be sent to theatres throughout the country. Spectators saw small, indistinct pictures of a man and a woman's bead, and saw lips move in perfect synchronization with words from a loudspeaker. A separate camera showed their hand gestures.

Since 1956, the year of de-Stalin-ization and that of the spontaneous wave of decollectivization and the return of land to private ownership, Polish farmers, untiring workers who are profoundly religious and passionately attached to their land, have been the Communist state's base of stability — and the main beneficiaries of a regime that is supposed to favor industrial work-

Thus, it is not surprising that the various rebellions, those of the workers in 1956, of students in 1968, and again of workers in 1970 and 1976, could never get through the gates of rural communities. And with the exception of a few movements of annoyance hrought on by the government's refusal to authorize the construction of new cburches, the Polish countryside surrendered to the enticing charms of the consumer society and remained deaf to the remote hattle cry of the cities. Until this year. But apparently it is only a misunderstanding: apparently the farmers do not know that their own happiness is at stake.

The Polish government recently passed a law guaranteeing an oldage insurance for farmers. The state, thus, says that it bopes to insure an old-age pension for each male farmer as soon as he reaches 65 and for every woman at 60 . . . if the farmer leaves the occupation and abandons his farm to an heir or to the state. In this way the government hopes to increase the productivity of the agricultural sector hy preventing the average age of the farm population from rising.

The law was passed without seriously consulting beforehand those for — or against — whom it was intended. And by linking the obtaining of pensions to the level of the productivity of farms, it makes it impossible for about 30 percent of the farmers (the poorest among them) to take advantage of its benefits, while requiring them, never-theless, to pay premiums regularly. Furthermore, the worker-farmers. who are mainly in Poland, bave to pay two premiums (as salaried em-ployees and as independent farmers) but can receive only one pen-

In other words, poorly prepared, poorly presented and improperly explained, the law has met only hostility and suspicion from the farmers who see it as a new tax, a new bureaucratic invention aiming to extort from them a maximum offer for a minimum of gain.

As soon as the government's intention to pass such a law was made public in May of last year, 22 veterans of the Farmers' Movement (in principle favorable to the regime) published a memorandum warning the authorities of the serious consequences that could ensue from such a dangerous operation. But to no avail. Instead of sending the draft law back to the drawing board, the gov-ernment forced the hill to be adopted by a docile parliament (it was unanimous in June, 1976, for the price increase, which was canceled 24 bours later by the workers' revolt) and immediately informed the farmers of the premiums that they would have to pay. More than 20 percent of the farmers immediately sent back their premium forms. Last July 20, 200 delegates from the region of Lublin (an industrial and university center in Eastern Poland) assembled in the township of Ostrowek for the first independent action by Polish farmers in 20 years. There they petitioned the government to cancel the law, which only aggravates the imbalance between the city and the countryside."

Watergate Lesson: Time for Review?

WASHINGTON — By appointing his longtime political guru, Atlanta lawyer Charles Kirbo, to an informal overseer's role in the probe into the buge graft scandal at the General Services Administration, President Carter thought that be might pick up a few points for showing a "personal" interest in fighting crime.

Instead, he demonstrated how

Only five years ago, a White House politician named John Dean was assigned to "represent" presi-dential interests in what later became known as a cover-up; such White House meddling at Justice led Elliot Richardson, when he was appointed attorney general, to refuse to divulge to anyone at the White House details of the Spiro Agnew probe for fear of compro-mising the investigation.

Of course, the black hats of yesteryear now wear white hats, but the principle remains the same: When evidence of crime in government appears, the investigation and pros-ecution of that crime is first and foremost the responsibility of the attorney general and his Depart-ment of Justice. White House interference — whether called "direc-tion," "interest," or "coordination" - is improper on its face, whether its purpose is to cover up or claim

Fortunately, Attorney General Griffm Bell — a former Kirbo law partner - saw the Carter move for hat it was: not only an insult to his department and a reflection on his integrity, but a fundamental misreading of the criminal justice procedure. No president can send any private citizen, no matter bow trusted, into a grand-jury room, or make him privy to the progress or

What is this "coordination" business? The extent of cooperation between GSA internal investigators and Justice officials requires no decision at all: If GSA gumshoes do not cooperate wholeheartedly with law enforcement officials, they should be prosecuted for obstructing justice. Then they'll coordinate. Kirbo ought to get all the way in, reeks of conflict of interest.

This "Czar Kirbo" episode vivid ly illustrates the depths to which the reputation for competence of the Justice Department has sunk, even in White House eyes, and for good reason:

(And not all the right records at that.)

• When the highest federal drug official broke a federal law by fraudulently prescribing a danger-ous substance, Justice declined to investigate on the grounds that Dr. Peter Bourne's lawbreaking was covered by "competent local juris-diction" across the Potomac River in Virginia. But local authorities said they had no control of crimes committed in the White House. Result: no investigation of Dr. Bourne. The man who refused to see that this painful decision was his to make was the new chief of the Criminal Division, Phillip Heymann. Evidently his standards have changed since working for Special Prosecutor Archibald Cox.

No wonder Justice has become a political snakepit. The Name Game

I had a good laugh, when reading your article "A Name is a Name -when the U.S. Committee says so" (IHT, Aug 18), because it reminded me of an occurence about 50 years ago, when I happened to be in Tanganyika, i.e. formerly Deutsch-Ost-Afrika (= German East Africa). One day I happened to come across an old German map of the country showing the Pangani River, along one side of which was written in bold letters "Ngambo." The topographer in question evidently had not been very conversant with the local idiom and after asking the name of the region on the other bank from a native, be got the evident answer "ngambo," which in Kinswahili simply means "the other side" — which thus was perpetuated on the map.

Being Swiss, I know only too well bow the problem of geographical names can arouse the covetousness of men. Thus the inhabitants of the world-famous resort Zermatt quite naturally call the peak which towers above their village "Matterborn," whilst the French-speaking people insist on referring to it as "Mont Cervin," and on the other side of the frontier one knows it as the "Cervino." And there are beaps of similar examples in Switzerland.

If you go to Turkey and address a letter to somebody in Constanti-nople or Smyrna, it is sure never to arrive, because the Turks maintain that the only correct names are Istanbul and Izmir.

And how about Leghorn Le. Livorno, or vice versa Parigi and Londra for Paris and London - in other words where do conventional names start and where do they end?

Science and China

According to the International Herald Tribune of Aug. 25, physi-cists from Peking attended the 19th international conference on high energy physics in Tokyo, as well as five physicists from Taiwan, thus ending 30 years of boycotts. This is interpreted, according to diplomatic sources, as the result of a high level policy change of the Peking leaders, calculated to win American sympathies. Another in-terpretation is possible: the Chinese scientists may have won a sig-nificant hattle against their ministry of foreign affairs. If it is true that the Peking authorities did not let their scientists attend meetings visited by Taiwanese, this would grip of some form of schizophrenia.

On the one hand, Mr. Gierek made merous sterile efforts. If Chinese scientists are now attending scientific meetings, it only means that their leaders are willing to open new windows on the world.

It is alarming that the first interpretation of this episode was dis-cussed at length while the other one was not even mentioned. Too often, we perceive the world as a chess game where scientists are only the pawns of the national policymakers. The troth is that artists and scientists are constantly struggling against politically inspired restrictions.

It is the scientists which are slowly changing the world, and setting the stage for the future, while the diplomats are entangled in a network of obsolete mythology.

Inflation

This concerns "Prologue to the New Recession" (1HT, Aug. 5), by Robert Lekachman, identified as a teacher of economics at City University of New York.

Mr. Lekachman laments the dangers and hardships of inflation, which we can all confirm. He follows with a list of measures which the Congress and/or the president could take, all of which be presumably views as corrective. What mystifies this reader is how

Mr. Lekachman can write an article on inflation without once defining inflation and naming the chief cul-prit. Inflation (cf. Webster's Dictionary) is the increase in the volume of money and credit relative to the available volume of goods and services. Since the federal govern-ment is the sole legal creator of money, and is the single most pow erful influence on the volume of credit, it follows that the federal government is responsible for infla-tion. It also follows that the officials of the federal government who are charged with the responsibility for monetary and fiscal matters are the people who can reduce or elimi-nate inflation.

Sadly, Mr. Lekachman proposes to fight inflation with more govern-ment intervention, when government action created the problem in the first place by borrowing to cover the huge hudget deficits of the last 15 years. In fact, government intervention in the working of the free market almost always causes mis-allocation of resources and dis-cialized journals, but reports of in- tortions of distribution which, on powers, unlike the desperate na-

Mr. Lekachman correctly observes that there is a "dangerous" public mood." However,I fear that be bas proposed "Band-aid" measures, when the malady requires drastic surgery.

It seems a pity that in "SALT— Learning from Past" (1HT, Aug.24), George F. Will, after dem-onstrating the "featherheadedness" of the 1920s movement to "outlaw" war, and the futility of the Kellogg-Briand Pact, turns his demonstration into an implied lesson of questionable validity. "SALT agree-ments to limit armaments are worthless, but not harmless" he suggests, and will be so perceived in 2028. The Kellogg-Briand Pact was the brainchild of men of different cultures and interests who shared one disability: They were blind to the explosive forces built into the rickety structure of European nationstates in the wake of the First World War (of which Keynes had vainly warned in his prophetic "Economic Consequences of the Peace"). No incantation could disarm these forces, only a restructur-ing of the political framework of the world economy could — not a task for "featherbeads," either then

That restructuring actually came to pass, not as a result of states-manship and vision, but of an explosion set off by madmen, but made all but inevitable earlier by rational, honorable men. As a result of that upheaval today's super-ies to the Hitlers, Tojos and Mussolinis, do not confront a single issue which, when the chips are down, can prove a casus belli. This has been the fundamental reality since World War II, which has been obscured by three decades of bellicose, terribly costly posturing on all sides. Peace pacts today would therefore not fly in the face of reality, hut belatedly acknowledge it.

TALENCE, France, Sept. 12 V (IHT) — According to Henry Pleasants, in his book "The Agony of Modern Music." "serious music is a dead art." He quotes composer Paul Hiodemith, who said, a gener-auoo ago, that some "serious" composers develop "an oversublimated technique which produces images of emotions that are far removed from any emotional experiences a relatively normal human being ever has. In doing so, they advocate the esoteric 'art pour l'art,' the follow-ers of which can only be emotional imps, monsters or snobs. Since then, borrowed from jazz, improvisation has been introduced into "serious" music, prolonging its life by attraction talented instru-mentalisis. It presents a challenge. It is creation more than interpretation. And when youngsters began strumming guitars in the sixties, improvisation became something of participatory sport.

Following these developments, a new concept of teaching music is evolving in places as far apart as Valeoce and Moscow.

Ten years ago, a physics student named Yuri Kozyrov was playing in a Moscow University dixieland band. As a child, he was fortunate to have had a teacher who taught him to play by ear. He could play anything on the piano, whatever his musical fantasies suggested. He was surprised when be saw nobody else could do it. The rest of the band could only play music if written notes were put in front of them or they could repeat what somebody else had played. He decided to teach them what he had been taught. Then some professional musicians who wanted to learn the same thing approached him. The first steps were hard, but oow, 10 years Inter, the "Moscow Experimental Jazz Studio" has grown to include 20 teachers and Loan for British Airways WASHINGTON, Sept.12 (Reuters)—The U.S. export-import bank provisionally approved $151.2-million loan to British Airways to purchase 19 Boeing 737-200 planes, bank officials said today. They noted any loan above $60 million is subject to a 25-day review by the U.S. Congress, but no opposition is expected to the deal.

Executive Directors of the International Banking Group from around the world are: John Dunlop, Joseph Galazka, James Hildebrand, Warren Hutchins, Milan Kerno, Harry Martin, Richard Miles, Joseph Oliver, Richard Reibman, Gerard Troncin and Stephen Wilberding.

We grew at a record rate last year. Doing things no other banking institution can do.

Thlike any other banking institution in the world. the Merrill Lynch International Banking Group offers commercial and investment banking services in all the international capital markets outside the U.S., plus direct access to long-term capital in the U.S.

This unique international banking capability, coupled with Merrill Lynch's worldwide securities distribution and trading power, was no doubt decisive in helping the Group achieve its solid record of growth in 1977.

International public issues: $2.8 billion

International public issues managed or co-managed by Merrill Lynch amounted to $2.8 billion in 1977 versus $2.2 billion in 1976, an increase of 25%.

The total financing Merrill Lynch helped arrange for corporate or governmental clients in the U.S., Canada and worldwide amounted to over $30 billion in 1977.

Syndicated bank loans: $1.3 billion

Supported by a substantial increase in capital resources devoted to banking, we managed or co-managed $1.3 billion in syndicated bank loans during 1977, a notable increase over the $140 million of managerships in 1976. Commercial loans to corporate and governmental clients grew from $63 million in 1976 to $204 million at year-end 1977.

Eurodollar securities trading: $3.25 billion

In 1977, Merrill Lynch's International Banking Group trading volume in the Eurobond secondary markets was 62% greater than 1976.

Mergers and acquisitions

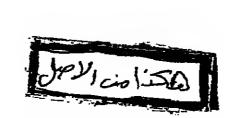

The Group's contacts make it an important source of merger and acquisition candidates around the globe. Merrill Lynch assisted in 47 projects involving mergers, acquisitions, divestitures or tender offers in 1977.

The Finance Minister indicated

he would propose possible new tax reductions as a further stimulus to the economy in a budget message to parliament between now and the end of the year. This appeared to lay to rest any thought of an au-turni general election, which the opposition had been clamoring for.

The deadline for such an election is next July 30 when the term of the present House of Commons ends. Although governments bere usually avoid waiting until the last moment, the election delay is giving the Trudeau cabinet time to act in the field where it is politically the most vulnerable — a lagging economy with high unemployment

Bank Rate Cut

[Late yesterday, the Bank of Canada increased its bank rate to 9.5 percent from 9 percent in a bid to bolster the beleaguered Canadian dollar. Following the move, several major Canadian banks announced they were raising their prime lending rates to 10% percent from 9% percent, AP-Dow Jones

[The central bank also announced that it lowered by another notch its target rate for the growth of the country's money supply. The interest rate increase brought the central bank rate to its highest level since November 1976. The bank rate, a key monetary indicator, is the rate at which the Bank of Canada makes its infrequent loans to commercial banks. Bank of Canada governor Ger-ald Boucy said that as for the Bank of Canada's new money supply tar-gets, the objective will be to keep the rate of increase of the money supply from its June 1978 level within a range of 6 percent to 10 percent a year. The limits of the previous range were 11 percent and 7 percent a year from the June 1977 level. The actual growth in the money supply, narrowly defined, was 8.5 percent in the year to June

Mr. Okura said be is unable at this stage to comment on the figures for the third quarter to end of July, which are due to be announced this week. The main reason for the fall in net income and the slower than targeted sales rise is the appreciation of the yen, he said, noting about 60 percent of Sony sales are overseas, about 30 percent of overseas sales are now produced overseas, he added.

Mitsubishi Electric Sees Profit Rise

Mitsubishi Electric said it expects its first-half profit before tax and special items in the period end-ing Sept. 30 to rise to between 9.7 billion (about $50.5 million) and 9.8 billion yen from 8.53 billion yen in the same period last year. First-half sales will also rise to about 413 billion yen from 380.15 billion yen, it said. Mitsubishi added it plans to declare an unchanged interim dividend of 2.5 yen per share. Mitsubishi said sales of heavy electric machinery in

Japan Steel Firms Forgo Dividends

Nippon Steel says it and four other major steel companies have separately decided to forgo interim dividend payments for the first half year ending this month. The others are Sumitomo Metal Industries, Kawasaki Steel, Nippon Kokan Kaisha and Kobe Steel. The decision was made because of anticipated rise of the yen. Nippon Steel said, however, it bopes to maintain a 6-percent or three-yen per-share divi-dend for the whole year ending next March.

Appears Headed for the Fed Board

WASHINGTON, Sept. 12 (AP-DJ) — Nancy Teeters, a pragmatic liberal who does not believe inflation can be fought solely with tighter credit and budget policies, appears headed for swift Senate confirmation to the Federal Reserve Board.

Both her economic philosophy and her political acceptability were displayed yesterday during an bour-long confirmation hearing held by the Senate Banking Committee. Panel members present had high praise for her. She is currently assistant staff director and chief economist of the House Budget Committee.

As she sees the current situation, interest rates are "relatively high" and the Fed's room for tightening credit conditions without risking serious damage to the economy is "more limited than it was at the beginning of the year." While the housing industry "seems to be holding up" well, she said. "we still haven't had enough time to assess the impact" of current levels of interest rates.

Declaring she was not a monetarist, she told the committee that any attempt to promote a steady growth of the money supply regardless of economic conditions could be "extraordinarily" costly in terms of slower economic growth and rising unemployment. Inflation, she contended, is "coming from other sources," including the depreciation of the dollar, increases in the minimum wage, rising farm prices, strong labor unions and higher foreign-oil prices.

New Products, Flexibility Revive Sector

U.S. Mutual Funds Making a Comeback as Diversification Grows

By John A. Jones

LOS ANGELES, Sept. 12 - U.S. mutual funds are making a strong comeback from a decline which has lasted most of this decade. In the process, the industry has grown a lot in scope, if not in dollars.

From a one-product industry selling shares in pools of stocks and bonds, it has broadened to offer a variety of investment choices, including money market funds to take advantage of soaring interest

More than new products, the industry has developed a new flexibility which allows its customers to switch their money easily from one kind of fund to another under the same management.

With the stock market rally of this spring and summer, some investors are even showing interest in the stock funds again, managers say. But the industry owes most of its gains to the newer kinds of funds and its new-found flexibility. Investors who stayed too long with the stock market fad of the swinging '60s are still wary of getting burned again, fund managers

Outperforming Market

Industry figures suggest that this caution may be misplaced, and that the better-managed funds are out-performing the widely watched stock market averages. Many investors, nevertheless, pulled out of the stock market funds as soon as their holdings retraced their losses and they could get their original stakes back.

In 1977, the industry sold $374 million more in fund shares than investors redeemed — the first time in six years that it had a net sales gain, the Investment Company Institute said. The Washington-based institute, whose members control most of the mutual fund industry's billion in sales in 1977, not counting the money market funds, an increase of 48.8% over 1076. highest since 1969. assets at the end of last year for a total of nearly $49 billion — still less than the 1968 level, and well below the $59.8 billion held in the peak year of 1972. By the end of July, 1978, assets totaled $55.3 billion, including $7.3 billion in the money market funds, compared with $49.1 billion at July 31, 1977, when the money market funds had $3.4 billion. Money market funds were the industry's first major new product in a series developed through the 1970s. Since 1974 they have given investors a yield on idle cash through investments in short-term securities such as treasury bills, commercial paper and bank certifi-cates of deposit. There are more than 50 such funds now. In times of high interest rates they provide an alternative to savings accounts for small investors. Option income funds also were made possible by provisions of the Tax Reform Act of 1976. They go after high income by purchasing common stocks which pay divi-dends, then writing (sciling) call options on exchanges, hoping that the premium received for the opnon will increase the total yield on the stock. "Despite the kind of languid stock market we've had since 1968, an awful lot of people who got into mutual funds in the early '60s have done quite well because they participated in a market that rose rather rapidly and preserved their values through the ups and downs of the '70s" said Jerome Hardy, chairman of the Investment Company Institutue and president of the Dreyfus Corp., one of the largest fund management

You don't build a name in banking overnight. We've been hard at it nearly 60 years.

International banking wasn't the last thing American Express thought of. It was one of the first.

In fact, financing international trade was an important part of American Express business during the early years of this century.

Today, American Express International Banking Corporation can help you with every phase of your international business.

We've been members of the banking community in Europe and Asia for almost 60 years.

For an American-owner banking network, that's an unusual heritage. And a logo experience.

With a global network of both commercial and a survey of the c

More than 2,000 active correspondent account relationships with banks around the world.

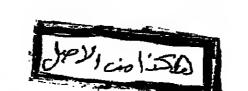

And a worldwide investment banking capability.

We're just as ready to help businesses grow within a country as we are to help them around the world.

Or take on a complex economic development project, and see it through every step of the way. From inception to completion.

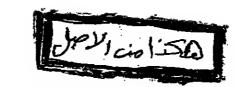

Or provide financing from raw material to finished product, from exporter to importer. By getting involved at both ends of a transaction.

THE HORSE OF PRIDE

By Pierre-Jakez Helias. Translated from the French and abridged by June Guicharnaud. Foreword by Laurence Wylie. Illustrated Yale University Press. 351 pp. $15.

Reviewed by Anatole Broyard

F we take the phrase "back to the womb" in its most metaphorical sense, I think it describes the way many of us feel about life on a farm as it used to be lived. Nature was still a mother then who cootrolled the rhythm of life. Everthing was connected, both by custom and by necessity. There were few empty spaces, either for leisure, anxiety or loneliness.

Work was the backbone of identity, as well as a fundamentalist religion. It was also a daily drama, sometimes tending toward tragedy, sometimes comedy. At the end of the day, you looked back on your work with the consciousness of having played your part in the scheme of things. While it was a fi-nite life almost a claustrophobia of nite life, almost a claustrophobia of ceaseless activity, it offered a kind of security.
Today, we mourn that security at the same time that we move still further away from it, talking of our oeed for space. As Pierre-Jakez Helias points out in "The Horse of Pride," the peasant has been forced, hy the gradual collapse of country life to move to the city, while the upper bourgeoisie has been forced, by the esthetic collapse of city life, to find houses in the country, so that they have changed places, taking on a caricature of each other's position. ture of each other's position.

Most of "The Horse of Pride" is about the early part of this century, when the author was a child in a small agricultural village. Blessed with one of those classical grandfathers who remembered everything and who delighted in the company of a small boy. Helias is able to recreate not only his own genera-tion but the two before it. While he writes with love and nostalgia about the past, he is neither prejudiced nor sentimental. He admits that the Bretoo peasants martyred his hack to keep his soul intact. Strangers today seem to see peasant life as a tahleau, a compositioo with horse or cow and borizon. The moral intensity of the peasant, which Vincent Van Gogh understood, is dismissed as superstition or ignorance, as an ana-chrooism. For the author, however,this moral intensity is precisely what made their life possi-hle. Instead of being banished from the Garden of Eden, they were obliged to farm it.

Womeo crocheted as long as there was light, even while burrying to town oo oecessary errands. Men who were lucky enough to own a small piece of land worked it at night, after a long day's work on someooe else's property. The author's father, who was infected with the need for learning, used to declaim from a book as be walked behind a plow. Social relationships among the Bretoe peasants were as formalized, as delicately structured, as in any royal court. The size of a peasant's soup bowl was deter-anomic. But what of the displaced peasant? Helias asks. What would sustain him in the cities? Would be put on a straw hat and go to the park or the zoo on Sundays? Should he sit on a beach and observe the digestive process of his full belly? Perhaps he would learn to regard the new emptiness of his life as his space, just as he used to look upon a field as his land.

"The Horse of Pride" was a best seller in France, where it repotedly sold over 600,000 copies. Apart from the many virtues of the book. the French bought it because they are, of all people, the gournets of nostalgia.

Shooting is a common activity in tournament play, but he wbo shoots often discovers, more often than in real life, that his violent departure from the norm has hackfired and hurt himself.

A player who judged that a cormal result will do him no good may produce his gun — a technical one not a physical one — and shoot for an abnormal result. This situation arises quite often at the end of a arises quite often at the end of a head-to-head team match, for a player may have good reason to think that his team is headed for defeat and that a big profit is needed to turn the scale. The phyious way to shoot is to overbid slightly, and most players confine themselves to that. There are more subtle procedures, however. One is to underbid slightly, in the bope that bad breaks will defeat the pormal contract. Another is to choose a slightly inferior line of play if that offers prospects of a swing result.

As shown on the diagrammed deal, if both members of a partner-ship decide to shoot by overbidding slightly the resulting cootract may be decidedly shaky. South opened with one no-trump, using the weak variety and promising 12 to 14 high-card points. This might well have ended the hidding, for North could tell that the combined highcard strength was oot adequate for

Pro Track Plans Collapse

By Alex Frere

LONDON, Sept. 12 (UPI) — Plans for the first World Professional Track and Field Championships have collapsed and the Arab backers are putting $400,000 into coaching programs of the Interna-tional Amateur Athletic Federation

The Dubai International Track and Field Championships, announced in London last year, were scheduled to take place this fall with $2.2 million in prize money.

But track and field sources said the concept never got off the sional. ground for one good reason — The most top amateurs now earn so much under-the-table appearance money that they cannot afford to turn professional and cut off their source of income for just one annual event.

The sources said only a handful of athletes approached were willing to cut their "amateur" ties.

Phillies Stop the Pirates And Open a 5-Game Lead

Dear Over 40: The generation gap died ignored and heartbroken in the poverty of an East St. Louis flophouse four years ago. An autopsy ascribed death to an onset of 30th birthdays on the gnp's younger side. which drastically reduced the vital flow of contempt

Baker to keep the over-30 population inflamed. As the younger side of the gap began finding it increasingly ludicrous never to trust anybody over 30, the gap became languid and idle, lost its sense of purpose and started drinking.

Simultaneously, the gap's older side developed a violent seizure of Watergate syndrome, characterized by an insatiable craving for ntillation about government corruption. In an alarmingly brief time, the gap lost all interest in itself and expired of acute pointlessness. Fortunately, it was saved from a Potter's field burial and has been removed to the Smithsonian Institution in Washington for stuffing and mounting. It will eventually be displayed between two other distinguished relics of the American past, the incredibly boring leisure-time crisis of the early 1960s and the Metrecal-for-lunch brunch.

Dear Doctor: After 30 years of oot reading the comic strips, I have recently resumed and am appalled to see that Dick Tracy seems to be wearing somebody else's mustache. Is it Mutt's or Jeff's. And what does it mean? Has Tracy sold out to the hippies? (signed) American.

Dear American: The mustache Tracy is wearing used to belong to Major Hoople. It is composed of fabric taken from the tassel of Major Hoople's fez.

Tracy did not want the mus-tache. While you were away, the famous detective celebrated his 75th anniversary on the police force. During those years he had never

The federal government is furi-ous about the whole thing, and Senator Proximire wants to know why the police department is squandering money on synthetic mustaches at a time when the city is trying to cadge federal funds to meet its obligarions to Diet Smith.

Dear Dr. Omniscient: I see where Ramses II, the well-known mummy, has had his fungus infection cured by doctors in Paris and has been sent back to Egypt with a clean bill of health. What kind of a society is this that can cure fungus in a 3,000-year-old mummy but can't even cure the common cold?

(signed) Disgusted.

Dear Disgusted. The answer to your question is simple. The mummy didn't have the common cold. It had fungus. If it had been suffering from a cold, how do you know soci-ety couldn't have cured it? Vintage mummies may not be as resistant to cures as you are. If my reply seems curt, it is be-cause your phrasing of this query shows a profound ignorance of the proper way to ask disgusted questions. The only approved form for asking questions of this variety is as follows:

"How come a country that can go to the moon can't even cure the common cold?" There are millions of variations: "How come a country that can go to the moon can't even keep the streets clean?" Or, How come a country that can go to the moon can't even get the mail cross town in less than three days?"

Et cetera. The answer to all these questions that there is absolutely no correlation between skills required to go to the moon and those required to clean streets or deliver mail, just as there is none between the skills required to cure a mummy's fungus and your runny nose. The men and women on the moon and aboard Argo grin and shake hands. Project Daedalus has begun.

Year 2080 and the Starship Daedalus

By Thomas O'Toole

WASHINGTON (WP) — The year is 2080. America's space shuttle Enterprise has long been replaced by a larger winged craft named Argo, flown by men and women from 12 nations. Argo is out beyond the moon, following the unseen tracks of another spacecraft, almost 500 million miles away.

On the moon itself, giant antennae operated by the Lunar Astronomical Observatory silently track the same spacecraft. Suddenly, electronic signals pour in from deep space. The men and women on the moon and aboard Argo grin broadly and shake hands. Project Daedalus has begun. The first starship built by the people of Earth has left the orbit of Jupiter and is on its way out of the solar ageter.

Fanciful? Stanley Kubrick's next movie?

No. Project Daedalus is the dead-serious brainchild of some of the best brains in the British Interplanetary Society. Thirteen of them, to be precise. All professionals in the British rocket and disprofessionals in the British rocket and disprofessionals in the British rocket and British rocket and aircraft establishment, who put in more than 10,000 man-hours in the last five years to blueprint what they describe as the first workable flight to a nearby

Daedalus, they call it, after the ingenious Greek craftsman who built the Labyrinth for Minos of Crete and then the wings that took him away from Crete when Minos set out to murder Daedalus and his son, Icarus.

The final report describing Project Dae-dalus has just been printed by the society and it is a serious and scholarly work of almost 200 pages. But it has more than scholarship. It is as fascinating and compelling a work as good science fiction. It is bedrocked in imagination. Parts of it could have been written by J.R.R. Tolkien.

You can't build a starship without a star to fly to and so the BIS has chosen Barnard's Star, a dwarf star smaller, cooler and older than our sun that lies almost six light years from Earth. Barnard's Star is not the nearest star to our solar system. Alpha Centauri is closer, But Barnard's Star wob-bles about the heavens in a way that strongly suggests it supports a solar system of its own that takes in as many as six planets. Getting to Barnard's Star won't be easy. The BIS figures it will take at least 20 years to design a starship, test its nuclear-pulsed rockets and fly at least one prototype out of the solar system and back in again to test the starship concept. There is also the matter of money. The BIS never estimates what Daedalus will cost, except to say that it will be too much for a single nation or even a group of nations. The whole Earth must agree to build a starship.

Of course, there will be no people aboard the starship Daedalus. As close as Barnard's Star is to Earth, it will still take 50 years to get there and when it gets there it will never return. It will just speed by the star and its companion planets (if it has any) and sur-vive long enough to radio back its findings to Earth before silently disappearing into

The BIS recommends that people in their 20s be picked to work on the project when Daedalus leaves the Earth. That way, most of them will still be alive when the starship Barnard's Star in 50 years is going to take a brand-new means of propulsion, one that will take the starship to its target at an unheard of speed of 22,000 miles a second. That's 12 percent of the speed of light.

There is only one way a starship can reach that kind of speed. It must use a means of propulsion that makes use of the energy released by tiny hydrogen bombs. A pulsed thermonuclear rocket, which ignites thermo-ouclear bombs behind it, then uses the enor-mous energies released in the explosions to push it along at ever increasing speeds through space.

The trouble with this is you need a fuel made of helium-three to sustain these high explosions. Where does one find this exceedingly rare isotope of helium? Only in the atmosphere of the planet Jupiter. The BIS suggests that the Daedalus spacecraft be assembled there, and then the helium-three could be "mined" out of the Jovian atmosphere at the same time.

How does one mine a planet without min-ers? By using robots, of course, the likes of which haven't been seen anywhere outside the movies. Two of these robots would be assigned to Daedalus, and they will be called "wardens." Once they had assembled the spacecraft in orbit around Jupiter and stored the helium-three, they would take on the task of watching over the starship and repairing anything that broke down, all the way out to Barnard's Star. Next to the wardens, the most intriguing passengers aboard would be the computers, the starship's captain and crew. Invested with executive authority, the computers would make all the decisions on the 50-year flight to the star. Not one human decision would be made once Daedalus left the environs of Jupiter. The reason is simple. By the time Daedalus encounters its star, the time it takes for a signal to reach the starship from Earth will be 12 years. Even a simple decision like a change in course will have to be made by computer.

The main reason for going to Barnard's Star and not other nearby stars like Wolf's Star or Sirius or Alpha Centauri is astronomers' suspicion that there may be planets in orbit around Barnard's Star. What better triumph would there be than for Daedalus not only to make this discovery but to examine the planets up close, send photographs of them back to Earth and, possibly, even discover some form of life on one of the

The BIS has devised a beguiling scheme for Daedalus to do all this. The starship will carry two enormous telescopes, which will scan the region around Barnard's Star, start-ing when the starship is 10 years away from it. If and when the telescopes spot the plan-ets, their oumber and location will be pin-pointed by the starship's computer. Course changes will be made. Instrumented probes will be deployed from the starship, each of them targeted for the planets in orbit around the star.

When the starship reaches the star, it will speed by 22,000 miles a second without slowing down. Its instruments, its cameras, its 18 probes will be whirring away, taking measurements and pictures that will be stored away in its computers. The 50-year voyage will end in an encounter that lasts less than a day.

For two years after the starship passes be-yond the star, it will send back a steady flood of information on where it has been, what it has seen and how much it has learned. When the coded signals reach the solar system, they will be intercepted by an enormous relay satellite placed in orbit around the planet Jupiter. The relay satellite will pass the information on to Earth, where the grandchildren of the people who started it all will be waiting to receive it.

Will it be worth waiting for? The BIS thinks so and passes judgment on it in an oblique way. This is the way they put it; "If we are uowilling to commit many generations to an interstellar voyage in an "ark-type" vehicle, then mankind may be des-tined to orbit this small yellow star until it dwindles." Not a happy thought.

Mexican Women Get PEOPLE: Mexican women's Their Own Subway

Mexico City's experiment with the world's first sexually segregated subways got off to a bumpy start. Officials contended that separating the sexes during rush hour was necessary to save women from the fan-ny-pinching, fondling and other male chauvinistic assaults they suffer in overcrowded subway trains and stations. So, the men were separated from the women on one of the city's three subway lines as an experiment which, if successful, may be followed by enforced segregation on the other two lines by gation on the other two lines by 1980. Judging by the first results, 1980 was a long way off. "Where's my husband," 50-year-old Elena Garcia complained to a policeman. "I lost my husband about one hour ago and I can't find him." Couples were separated and departures delayed as police spent time removing men from the first three women-only cars of each nine-car train. Reactions were mixed and divided along rather predictable lines. along rather predictable lines. "Thank God for the program. We were fed up with the shoving and grabbing and with the men's dirty language," said 19-year-old student Patricia Arrieta. "Bottom-pinching and caressing of women won't stop," said Jose Luis Escorcia, a 29-year old chemical engineer. "It's

Women have done so much for his career that he wanted to do something for them, singer Tom Jones says. So Jones, prompted by Midge Costanza, agreed to perform a benefit concert in Washington for the Equal Rights Amendment rati-fication fund of the National Organization for Women. And if unliberated bousewives throw roses, hotel-room keys and sometimes their panties at the singing Welshman, what will feminists throw? "Pies, maybe," said Jones, Miss Costanza, at the time a presidential assistant, met Jones when he visited the White House in June, decided the ERA needed some supporters with sex appeal and persuaded him to perform for NOW, Taking a break during rehearsals, Jones said that he was curious about how activists of the women's movement would respond to his macho per-formance, especially since he was still trying to live down his comments about career women from years ago. I never said that all women belong in the home. I just said that I want my wife to stay at borne," explained Jones. "I would oot want to be married to a career woman because that would take up too much of her time away from me. But if some women want to work, that's fine. A liberated woman is someone who is doing exactly what she wants to do. I know many happily married women who feel li-berated and not oppressed."

In St. Louis, guests mysted to a ball Saturday night will be asked to take off their clothes. The Fashing Group of St. Louis, sponsoring the benefit ball, plans to sell the clothes to promote the arts. The organization said that its Clothes-Off-Your-Back Ball is expected to draw about 500 couples. "We want fine clothing and jewels and furs," said one of the organizers, Nametic Wachter. Mrs. Wachter said tiagguests will not be asked to undrage until they are ready to go homes. guests will not be asked to undergountil they are ready to go home. The evening includes supper and dancing. At the end of the evening the stripped guests will leave with pieces of paper giving the amounts for income-tax deductions. Those amounts will be provided by a Newman-Marcus appraiser. Because many guests will not want to leave in the oude the sponsors will proin the oude, the sponsors will provide plastic bags to wear home.

Tokyo Zoo officials are keeping a close watch on the giant kemai panda Lan Lan, who, they think may soon give birth to the first panda cub born in captivity outside China. Officials at Tokyo's Ueno. Zoo say that they are confident: that 10-year-old Lan Lan and her 8-year-old male companion, Kang, both gifts from China in 1972, mated on May 18. The materials ing recorded by zoo and new pho-tographers, means she might give; birth later this month or next mooth, although experts say they are not yet sure she is pregnant. An II-man team, aided by a television. camera installed in her quarters, is maintaining a constant vigil over.

Lan Lan. Five previous mains of forts have failed in Tokyo, as have efforts in London and Washington. The Chinese have produced 12 panda cubs in captivity.
